

HER LIFE A TRAGEDY.

and a Continuous Performance at That —The Pot Canary.

Down on Fourth avenue there is a small girl whose life is a tragedy—and a continuous performance, too. She told a good-natured old gentleman about it the other day when he went into her father's shop to buy a canary. A bird shop is a confusing sort of place, and the old gentleman wandered about in a dazed, near-sighted way, listening to the proprietor's account of the virtues of each bird. Finally he took a fancy to an aggressive canary that hurled torrents of musical defiance at the would-be purchaser. The owner of the shop was called away for a few moments, and presently the old gentleman became conscious of a scrap of a girl who was looking at him out of big, fearful eyes.

"Please, sir," said a quavering little voice. Then it stopped in sheer fright.

"What's the matter, dearie?" asked the old gentleman, who had grandchildren at home.

The "dearie" was so distinctly encouraging that the child plucked up courage.

"Please, sir, buy another one, not this one."

"Why mustn't I buy this one?" The tears left the eyes and trickled down either side of an absurd little nose.

"It's always that way," the forlorn little maid wailed. "Thutht ath thoon ath I love them real much thomebody comth and buyth them. I'm thoe tired of getting thutted to new oneth. Thith ith the wisthest one of all, and I want to keep him myself, tho I do."

She put a few inches of soiled kerchief to her eyes, and the canary shrieked his opinion of old brutes who made little girls cry.

"Why, bless my soul!" exclaimed the old gentleman, remorsefully. "You do have an awful life, don't you? Now, don't you worry. I'm not going to buy this canary."

The woebegone face brightened, and she smiled at him gratefully. Then she relapsed into gloom.

"Thomebody elth will," she prophesied dimly.—N. Y. Sun.

DUDE RISKED HIS LIFE.

That He Might Fix Up That Lovely Complexion of His.

It is said that women have been known to take their curl papers down before they made their escape from a burning house, but the height of dudsiness remains to be fastened upon a Kansas City young man who was recently surprised by an alarm of fire in his boarding house.

This young man is everywhere famous for his beautiful complexion. His cheeks are pink, his forehead white as marble and his lips cherry red. Some of his enemies say that it is artificial, but the girls swear to its naturalness.

One morning a little less than a week ago the cook attempted to light the fire with kerosene oil. The usual thing happened, and part of the kitchen was ablaze. Her screams roused the landlady, and she rushed from one door to the other awakening her boarders and bidding them flee from the burning house. The dudsy young man occupied the second-story back room. She pounded on his door, and thought she heard him respond. When all the boarders were assembled in the front yard waiting for the fire department to put out the blaze the D. Y. M. was missed.

"Good, gracious, he's still asleep!" shouted the landlady. "Won't some one go up and break in his door?"

There was really but little danger, the fire being confined to the kitchen, and one of the boarders took it upon himself to save the missing one's life. He pounded at the door with his boot-heel, and when still no response came he pressed his shoulder against it and broke it in. There, in front of the mirror, stood the dudsy young man, with a powder puff in one hand and a piece of chamois in the other, fixing up that lovely complexion of his.—St. Louis Republic.

Stories of the Stage.

The first regular comedy in the English language was "Ralph Roister Doister." It was written by Nicolas Udall and printed anonymously in 1566. Its authorship was not ascertained till 1818. "Roister doister" was a proverbial term for a hare-brained fellow. Among the characters in the piece are "Matthew Merry-greek," "Garvin Goodluck," "Madge Mumblecrust," "Tibet Talkapace," "Annot Alyface" and "Dobinet Doughtie." Evidently from these names Mr. Udall must have been the Charley Hoyt of his time.

Time and Importance.

"It takes time and labor to do anything of real consequence," remarked the man who poses as a sage.

"Well," replied the member of congress, "that may be the general rule. But it seems to me that the more important a bill is the less time it sometimes takes us to talk it through."—Washington Star.

THIS AND THAT.

A pet goat belonging to Owen McGachem, of Elizabeth, N. J., playfully butted its owner, and one of its horns penetrated an artery in McGachem's leg, causing a flow of blood which resulted in death.

With a switch in his hand, Harry Vanderwater, of Wallkill, N. Y., tried to battle with a nest of hornets. The insects turned upon him, and stung him so severely that death resulted within a week.

In France women are admitted as students in the universities on the same conditions as men, and are eligible for the diplomas conferred on male students. In Belgium there is a statutory equality for men and women. It is the same in Holland, and statistics show that the number of women students is steadily increasing.

A citizen just returned from Paris describes a very ingenious device that has been adopted there for use in cabs. It is a register that indicates the exact distance automatically the cab travels on a trip, and at the end displays the amount of the legal fare for that distance for the information of the passenger.

M. Louis Genari, a lawyer of Nice, made an excursion toward the Italian frontier, near Brell, taking a camera with him. As nothing was heard of him inquiries were made and it has been ascertained that M. Genari was arrested by Italian carabinieri, charged with being a spy. He is imprisoned at Genoa.

Mrs. W. Stevens, of New Haven, while temporarily deranged, drew all her money, $600, from the bank and went to the First Baptist church, where she recklessly threw $300 on the plate. The remaining $300 she contributed to the Grace Methodist church. The money was subsequently returned to Mrs. Stevens' husband.

Fruit growers of Michigan who get tired of trying to turn off agents of Chicago commission merchants have taken to accepting the stencil plates bearing the names and addresses of the merchants, which these agents proffer on the understanding that the grower's full crop is to be shipped to the house whose stencil he accepted. One enterprising grower has 122 of the plates.

A REPORTER'S TALE.

Once He Invited Dana to "Lean on His Own Breakfast."

"I'll never forget the first time I had a conversation with the late Charles A. Dana," said the old reporter, according to the Boston Journal. "I had gone on the staff of the evening edition of his paper the day after it started, with Amos J. Cummings as managing editor. I had never met Mr. Dana. About two weeks after I went to work I was sent by Cummings to report a murder trial in the court of general sessions. The trial lasted for several days. I was living in Harlem. One day I overslept myself and started downtown without having eaten any breakfast, so that I would get to court in time to report the trial. I rode down on the Third Avenue 'L.' When the train stopped at Thirty-fourth street a big man entered and plumped himself down in a seat beside me.

"His right shoulder pressed back against my left shoulder and his elbow was in my ribs.

"I was in a bad humor, and I said to him, in a sarcastic way:

"I beg pardon, but have you had your breakfast?"

"Yes, sir, I have," he said, pleasantly.

"Well, I haven't had mine," I growled. "Will you kindly lean the other way?"

"Certainly, sir," he said.

"Thank you."

"I sat there reading for some time, but felt rather than saw that the man was looking hard at me. I glanced at his face for the first time, and was horrified to find the cold, bluish-gray eyes of Charles A. Dana fastened on me.

"I felt pretty uncomfortable, but I knew he didn't know me or that I was on his paper. I kept out of his way for six months.

"One night the boys gave a farewell dinner to Cummings, when he went to congress. Mr. Dana presided. I was called on to say something, and I felt happy enough to tell how I told Mr. Dana to lean on his own breakfast.

"The old man leaned back in his chair and laughed heartily.

"I remember it," he said, "but you're mistaken about one thing. I knew who you were perfectly well. I've been watching your work ever since.

Inanities of the Inanimate.

"Just listen how that steam-pipe puffs," said the shingle on the roof.

"I'd have you know," panted the pipe, "that my work is exhausting."—Indianapolis Journal.

Japan Will Not Protest.

Washington, May 19.—Mr. Toru Hoshi, the Japanese minister, called on Secretary Day and denied to him the statements that Japan would or had protested against the occupation of the Philippines by the United States. Mr. Hoshi afterward said for publication that the reports to that effect were based on nothing more than wild and unwarranted rumors.
